

TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF USE

Veranatura advises all users to read the following terms carefully before accessing its website.

When you access the website, you declare that you have read, understood and accepted the Terms and Conditions described below, without the need for further consent. These terms may be changed by Veranatura, at any time, with any revised terms applicable at the time of posting on the website.

Copyright and Intellectual Property

The Veranatura brand, the data relating to it, logos, and graphics in general and all the content of this website are the property of Veranatura, owner of the rights and. As such they are protected by national and international legislation on the protection of Intellectual Property and Copyright.

All content on the Veranatura website is protected by law, and any copying, transmission, use, modification, sale, publication or any other uses, by any means, are expressly forbidden, with the exception of those provided for by law, or with prior permission from Veranatura.

All content on the Veranatura website is protected by law, and any copying, transmission, use, modification, sale, publication or any other uses, by any means, are expressly forbidden, with the exception of those provided for by law, or with prior permission from Veranatura.

When citing or referencing the content of the webpage, Veranatura and the full URL of the contents consulted must be identified, including the date at which the website was consulted.

User activity

The use of the website for illegal purposes, or those that infringe on moral behaviour, or that can cause damage to reputation of the “Veranatura” brand is expressly forbidden. The user is expressly forbidden from creating or introducing into this website any kind of virus, worm, Trojan horse, script or any other code or program that can be destructive or harmful to the website.